

Oh Hey, Pinyon Jay

Celebrate Pinyon Jays with Audubon, Drinking Horn, and Grand Canyon Trust

Pinyon Jays and Craft Mead?

RAISE A GLASS FOR A DECLINING BIRD

The Pinyon Jay is an iconic and declining bird of the intermountain west, but what does it have to do with mead? Two things: water and climate. Dependent on thriving agriculture and reliable water, the future of your favorite brew, just like the Pinyon-Juniper woodlands and the Pinyon Jay, depends on us acting now to protect precious natural resources.

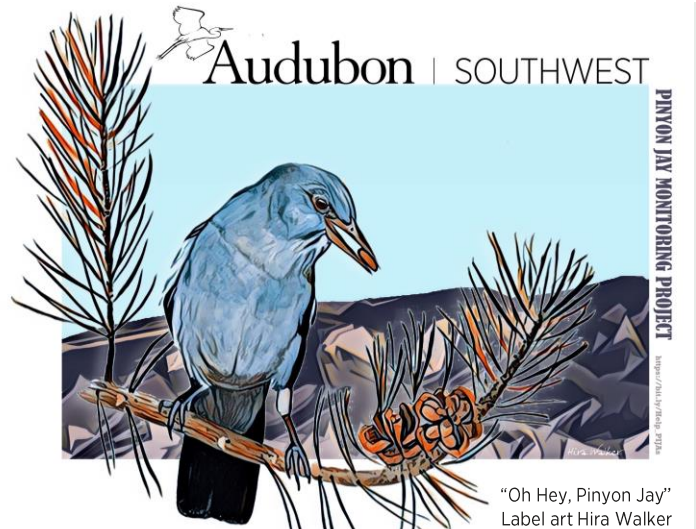

To help spread the word, Flagstaff's Drinking Horn Meadery is releasing "Oh Hey Pinyon Jay" mead for the second year! To celebrate the Pinyon-Juniper woodlands, they are brewing with juniper berries, prickly pear, and local honey – and bottles sport Pinyon Jay conservation labels. In addition to great mead, each bottle provides a call to action and a sign-up link where folks can go to join our growing team of community scientists.

We hope you'll join us in raising a glass for this deserving bird!

RSVP for any/all events here.

<https://act.audubon.org/a/oh-hey-pinyon-jay-mead-release-events>

Cheers!

Join Us for Free Events!

October 19, 2023, 6-7:30 pm – Pinyon Jay Presentation and Mead Tasting at Drinking Horn Mead Hall: Swing by the mead hall and enjoy a natural history presentation by experts Dr. Russell Benford of the Arizona Department of Forestry and Fire Management and Ms. Anne Pellegrini of Northern Arizona Audubon. Drink some mead and connect with your community!

October 21, 2023, 8-10am – Pinyon Jay Bird Walk Location TBD, please RSVP. Come explore Pinyon-Juniper woodlands near town with Northern Arizona Audubon guides and learn local plants, birds, and other animals. No experience necessary!

November 1, 2023, 6-8:30 pm - Trivia Take-over at Drinking Horn Mead Hall: Join Audrey Kruse from the Grand Canyon Trust for a lively and fun-filled trivia night focused on Colorado Plateau flora and fauna, as well as birds, bands, and popular culture. Something for everyone and free admission!